The Result .- Fairfield and Windham counties have come in—but they bring with them no sufficient "redeeming spirit." Windham, the sent of antimasonry, has given a majority for the Jackson candidates. Fairfield line done better but she has hardly begun to bring up the feeway. Every thing has gone by the board-there's no use in mincing matters-Governor, Secretary, Treasurer, Congress, and both branches of the Legislature are Jackson to the core. In the lower house of the legislature, "the party" will have a majority of 30 or 40-and in the Senate nearly 4 to 1.

The Majority.-We have during the past week to ken considerable pains to ascertain the precise and relative strength of the votes for Governor in the different towns in this state; and though the vote for Edwards over Foot is sufficiently large to constitute a " healthy majority," we cannot with our figures make it so great by two or three hun.lred as the Hartford Times does. The following is a sonimary statement of the votes that we have been enabled to collect.

Total number of votes, (besides scattering) 41,259

The Times, in order probably to lessen the whigh majority in this (15th) district, has placed the votes for Senator in our good town of Harwinton in the wrong columns. Thus, it gives for Rockwell only 68 votes, and for Marsh 150-whereas the reverse should have been the fact, making a difference in the district of Fairfield county-old democratic Fairfield-is the only county in the state which during the late canvase has stood by her integrity. She has done well-her democracy is triumphant. She has reversed the position she assumed last fall—has now given a majority of 200 for the whig ticket, and has returned a majority of members to the legislature of the right stamp; but like the noble hand in the minority of 1833, they will be without authority or influence in their places-'King Numbers" will overpower them. Already we hear that the political guillotine is in preparation for the decapitation of some of her worthies; sons.

At the County Court for this county, held last week, James Ockman, of Sharon, a colored man, was in-dicted for adultery, found guilty, and senteaced to the State Prison for two years.

We have received a communication from Kent with the signature of " T," but as we can perceive no good to be attained by its publication, we decline inserting it. The election has passed; and with it should pass those embittered feelings engendered by the contest.

The elections in Virginia for Members of Congres and of the legislature are now going on. Returns have been received from only a few counties: in these the parties remain nearly as heretofore. In Henrico county, including the city of Richmond, the Jackson party carried their candidate, and in Albemarle, the residence of Mr. Ex-Senator Rives, where the most desperate exertions have been made, the whige were successful in defeating the friends of Mr. Rives. Full ters, turn out this man and that, and do a great many other smart things. Don't be too fast gentlemen; your zeal will cool amazingly before the 1st of May, and you will find some individuals in the Jackson ranks who will not be dictated to by eleventh hour men. It is the best trait in the Jackson party, and one that has long been preached up by Gideon Welles, to remember their early and consistent friends, and heave the twaddlers overboard. Some men that are now triumphing exceedingly at the success of the Jackson umphing exceedingly at the success of the Jackson party—and hosting of what they shall do, may thank their stars if they are permitted to have the smallest influence in the smallest matters.—New-Haven Pal.

Executive Electioneering, as he understands it.—The following article is copied from the Nashville (Ten.) Republicann, of March 17th.

Republicann, of March 17th.

Washington, Feb. 23, 1835.

My Rev. Sir—I observe in the Nashville Republican of the 10th inst, an article headed "General Jackson's Preference," which I think it my duty to motice.

All my friends know, that since I have been in the Executive Chair, I have carefully abstained from an interference with the elective franchise; and fuve invariably much upon the principle, that to the people belonged the exercise of this sacred eight—uninfluenced by my considerations but those which related to the public good. And yet the Editor of this paper, professing to entertain great respect for my character, undertakes to connect me personally with an attempt to divide the great body of Republicans in the choice which they are to make for a President; and by way of giving effect to his insinuation, appeals in the language of my bitferest enemies, here and elsewhere, to the independence of the people as a shield against "my dictation," which he suppostes my be attempted.

Every one must see that the professions of the Editor in that whick site made to take the form of friendship, in order that he may more successfully carry out his purpose of opposing the great Republican principles which I have endeavored to advance as President of the United States; and one of which, not to say the most important, is the necessity of looking above persons in any exigency, which threatens the ascendancy of those principles. All my friends thust perceive, that to be consistent, my preference as far as men are concerned, ought to be for him that is most likely to be the choice of the great body of Republicans; and yet, if this individual should not be Judge White, the Editor of the Republican is ready to cryout "Dictation."

Under such circumstances, seeing also that there are various misrepresentations of my views on this subject, I commit this letter to your discretion in or-

Under such circumstances, seeing also that there are various misrepresentations of my views on this subject, I commit this letter to your discretion in order that you may do me justice.

You are at liberty to say on all occasions, that, regarding the people as the true source of political power, I am always ready to how to their will and to their judgment—that, discarding all personal preferences, I consider the true policy of the friends of republican principles, to send delegates fresh from the people, to a General Convention, for the purpose of selecting candidates for the Presidency and Vice Presidency; and that to impose that selection before it is made, or to resist it when it is fairly made, as an emanation of Executive power, is to assail the virtue of the people, and, in effect, to oppose their tights to govern.

I send the paper containing the article I refer to, and request you to show this letter to the Editor, in order that he may no longer misrepresent me. Acknowledge the receipt of this letter.

I am, in haste, your friend,

ANDREW JACKSON.

The Rev. James Gwin, Nashville, Tenn.

What General Jackson's friends may know, respect-

The Rev. James Gwin, Nashville, Tenn.

What General Jackson's friends may know, respecting his having "carefully abstained from an interference with the elective franchise." his opponents think, and have long thought, they had abundant evidence of his not having abstained from it, even in his own case; but, on the contrary, that he took an active and decided part is forgarding his own interests when a case didnet for affice. The well known case of the correspondence with Kreps, a member of the Penosylvania legislature, in carrying on which, a letter written by his private secretary, proposing that the members of that legislature should communicate him for a second heat, was franked by himself. Other instances might be mentioned; but this is sufficient to disprove the asser-tion in this letter that all his friends know that he has carefully abstained from interfering with the elective

Gen. Jackson may now he considered, whatever Gen. Jackson may now be considered, whatever may have been the case before, as openly in the field, electioneering for Marine Van Buren. Notwinkstanding he says "that discarding all personal preferences. I consider the true policy of the friends of republican principles to send delegates, fresh from the people, to a General Convention, for the purpose of selecting candidates for the presidency and vice-presidency." his wishes and objects cannot be mistaken. Does the President of the United States flatter himself with the idea, that the people, for whom he professes such high veneration, can be gulled by such a flimsy covering as this? Selecting a candidate for the presidency), will be universally understood, as plainly and distinctly, as if declared in the simplest form of expression, to mean nominating Martin Van Buren. This cannot be winked out of sight. If the promoters of a General Convention believed, for one amment, that Judge White would obtain the nomination at such a meeting, the convention would never be held—that is, it would not be attended by those who are now so zealously engabe attended by those who are now so realously enga-ged in pushing it forward. And now, if the friends of that gentleman in the southern and western States, should come to the determination to send delegates to should come to the determination to send delegates to Baltimore, for the purpose of supporting his claims in that body, the Kinchen Cabinet would examine the whole ground very thoroughly before they would venture upon the experiment. That the friends of Van Buren might probably obtain, by such means as he well knows by experience how to use, a majority of the members of such a convocation, need not be ques-

But a majority merely would not answer the purpose But a majority merely would not answer the purpose. The great body of republicans, in such a case as this, would make but a poor figure if divided, even if it should not be exactly in the middle. The object in cathing the Convention is to obtain a manifement of Martin Van Buren. The body that comes to this result, no matter how chosen, nor by what tricks or manoenvies the result may be shall and, will be dignified by the name and sayle of the Creat Republican Party; and then that party, is all its ramifications and modifications, will be loudly arged by all the motives by which their leaders are influenced, to unite in support of the nomination.

That General Jackson means, by "him that is most likely to be the choice of the great body of republicans? Martin Van Buren, is as oblims as if the name was stamped on the letter.—N. Y. Adv.

Biographical Sketch of the late Cot. Tallmadge .-He was born in the year 1754, at Brookhaven, Long Island. In 1773, he was graduated at Yale College. Three years afterwards, (1776,) he entered the American army, as Lieutenant, with the appointment of Adjutant, in the regiment raised by the legislature of Connecticut, in that year. Thence, he continued to serve in our revolutionary army, until the end of the war. Very lew persons, if any, in our army, saw more ser vice, or were more actively, constantly, or usefully employed, in the operations of that war, than he. As an officer and disciplinarian, his sagacity, courage, zeal, and military enterprise was extensively known, and universally acknowledged, both by the army and and universally acknowledged, both by the army and the public.

In December, 1776, Congress, by its vote, traised four regiments of horse, with 16 additional regiments of infantry; confiding to the Commander-in-Chief, the power to appoint the officers of the whole 20 regiments. Under the power thus entrusted to him, Gen. Washington appointed Lieut. Tallmadge to the command of the first troop in the second regiment of lighthorse, with the rank of Captain. And in the Spring of the following year, (1777,) he received a Major's commission. Soon after this, he was honored by a direct confidential correspondence with Gen. Washington himself, concerning the great interests of the American army, and the military operations of the American army, and the military operations of the country; a correspondence, which continued through the whole remainder of the war.

the whole remainder of the war.

One of the most trying and affecting occurrences, in the life of Major T. during the war, was his charge of the gallant but ill-fated Major Andre, who, from the time of his capture, to that of his execution, was committed to the custody of Col. (then Major) T. The impression, which the fate of this gallant and accomplished officer, made upon Major Te, mind, was most deep and intensely distressing. Indeed, the intelligence, the refinement of manners, and striking accomgence, the refinement of manners, and striking accom-plishments of this young British officer, excited the returns from the state will not be received short of three or four weeks, as the elections are held in different counties on different days during the month of April.

We learn that some of the twaddlers in the Jackson parry, make tend threats of what they intend to do in the next Legislature; they are going to revoke charawing under the gibbert, my beeing seemed for a time insurportable. All were overwhelmed with the affecting apectacle, and their eyes softweet with tears." Major Tallmadge kindly walked by the side of this unfortunate young officer to the gallows, at the foot of which nate young officer to the gallows, at the foot of which he took leave of him.

In 1780, Major Tallmadge planned and executed the capture of the British fort of St. George, on L. I. and effected the destruction of the British magazines there; and this he did with such velerity, secrety and address, that not a man of his deachment was lost in the adventure. Forthis brilliant achievement he received the public thanks of Gen. Washington, as also a vote of thanks from Congress.

It is not intended to detail in this general notice, all the engagements, in which he took part. It may be sufficient to say, on this head, that he was in almost all the battles which took place in the northera states throughout the war. He was not present, indeed, at sufficient to say, on this head, that he was in almost all the battles which took place in the northern states throughout the war. He was not present, indeed, at that of Bunker Hill, or of Lexington, both of which occurred before he joined the army. But he took part in those of Long Island, White Plains, Braudywine, Germantown and Monmouth; and in many minor conflicts, between his own detachment only and various different detachments of the enemy's forces.

At the close of the war, he retired to private life, with the brevet rank of Colonel. He had received, during the war, no dangerous wound, or any lasting bodily hart; and in reference to this fact, he says, in his journal, "I seem to myself a singular instance of Divine protection."

Just before the evacuation of New-York by the British forces, he went, with the approbation of Gen. W. to the city, for the protection of such friends of their country's cause as had remained in that city, during its occupation by the British; and with much address, sought out, and placed them is safety; and thus preserved them from the abuse and violence to which they would otherwise have been exposed. On this occasion, he was treated with great civility by the British military and asval officers there, and particularly, by the British Commander-in-Chief, General Carlton.

Carlton.

In 1784, Col. T. fixed his residence in the town of Litehfield, (Conn.) where he afterwards continued to reside, till the time of his death. There he engaged in mercantile business, which he continued for many years with great success. In the year 1800, he was chosen a representative to Congress, which situation he held for 16 successive years 7 at the end of which, he declined a re-election. Theuseforward, he retired altogether from public life, and passed his time unrely as a private gentleman. In his deposit relations, he was one of the most aminute of men.

Whig victory at Partland.—We are glad to find that all is not bad news that comes from the cast.—Poor old Connecticut is given over to the buffelings of his entance reverence for a season—the old kitchen animal having returned to her wallowing; but a little further east, they do more worthily; for the good city of Portland has not only elected her Whig mayor by an immense majority, but she has carried every ward officer.
